

MOI Project Seminar Series, Autumn Term 2016

A major AHRC-funded project being undertaken by the Institute of English Studies and in collaboration with the Department of Digital Humanities at King's College London, the MOI Project team is currently working on 'A Publishing and Communications History of the Ministry of Information, 1939-45'. The MOI project's seminar series - which illuminates and investigates the work of the Ministry of Information throughout the Second World War – will resume in the autumn term, and seminars will take place between 6 and 7pm in the Institute of English Studies.

15th September, Room 234

“‘For the Sake of Freedom’’: Arabic Language Propaganda of the Ministry of Information during World War Two’

Louis Allday, PhD Candidate, SOAS, and Gulf & Arabic Specialist, British Library

20th October, Room 246

‘BIFF BANG POW! - The Commercial Artists Group, 'War Artists and Illustrators' and the Ministry of Information’

Tony Rich, Independent Researcher and former Creative Manager, J. Walter Thompson Communications Agency, London

17th November, Room 243

Title TBC

Katherine Howells, PhD Candidate, King's College London

15th December, Room 243

‘From Senate House to the River Plate - the Ministry of Information in Argentina’

Christopher Bannister, Postdoctoral Research Fellow, MOI Project – School of Advanced Study

INSTITUTE OF ENGLISH STUDIES

School of Advanced Study
University of London

SENATE HOUSE